AFTERSHOCK

Residents in Midwest, Southeast have long road ahead after deadly twisters

Reuters

LONDON, Ky. Calmer weather gave dazed residents of storm-wracked towns in the Midwest and Southeast a temporary respite Sunday as they dug out from a chain of tornadoes that killed at least 38 people since Friday.

But forecasters said more headaches were ahead for the hardest hit areas of Indiana and Kentucky on Sunday night, when up to 3 inches of rain and snow were expected to add to the burden for hundreds of residents whose homes were destroyed.

"It's very light right now, but the coverage and intensity of the precipitation is expected to increase ... into the evening," said Kurt Van Speybroeck of the National Weather Service.

At least 30 fast-moving tornadoes spawned by massive thunderstorms cut a swath of destruction in nine states from the Midwest to the Gulf of Mexico on Friday, tearing through blocks of homes, damaging schools and a prison, and tossing buses and trucks around like toys.

On Sunday, Indiana officials revised the state's list of fatalities to 12 from 14, saying two deaths weren't attributable to the storms. Twenty deaths were reported in Kentucky, three in Ohio and one in Alabama, officials said. Georgia also reported a storm-related death.

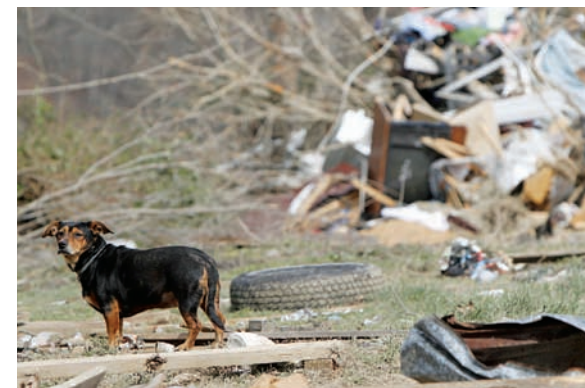

In London, Ky., an affluent community near the Tennessee border, churchgoers were eager Sunday to get back to some degree of normal life. In Laurel County, where the town is located, five deaths from the storms were reported.

Willa Reynolds greeted dozens of attendees at the front entrance of Grace Fellowship Church, many wiping snowflakes from their clothes as they walked in.

"It's good to see you," Reynolds said to one person. "It's good to see every single person who walks through the door after the week we had."

Friday's storms came on top of severe weather earlier in the week in the Midwest and brought the overall death toll from the unseasonably early storms to at least 50 people.

Cleanup crews worked to move downed power lines and clear debris, and residents began putting tarps over torn apart homes to prevent further damage. The more fortunate brought donations including diapers, blankets and food to area churches.

Orphaned toddler found in field dies

Reuters

NEW PEKIN, Ind. A toddler who was found alive in a field in tornado-ravaged southeastern Indiana after her parents and two siblings were killed when a twister struck their mobile home died Sunday of her injuries, Indiana state police said.

Angel Babcock, who was reported to be 14 months old, had been in critical condition in a Kentucky hospital since Friday, when she was found near her family's destroyed mobile home in New Pekin, Ind.

Sgt. Jerry Gooden of the Indiana State Police said he was notified Sunday afternoon by the county coroner in Louisville that Angel had died, bringing Indiana's death toll to 13 from Friday's tornadoes that have killed 39 people across the Midwest and Southeast.

Officials originally had reported that Angel had been found 10 miles away from her home, but a spokeswoman for the St. Vincent Salem Hospital where she was initially taken later said she was found close to her home.

On Sunday, extended family members kept a vigil at the girls' bedside at Kosair Children's Hospital in Louisville, where Angel had been in critical condition since she was airlifted there Friday evening.

Angel's family were the only people killed in Washington County, one of the hardest hit areas, Indiana officials said.

The Louisville paper identified them as her parents Joseph Babcock, 21, and Moriah Brough, 20; and her siblings, Jaydon Babcock, also a toddler, and Kendall Babcock, 2 months.

Springsteen still feels our pain

Stephen Markley

» redeye@tribune.com

I'm not going to try to persuade anyone that Bruce Springsteen is better than religion, but devotees of his music know what I mean.

We talk about discovering his canon the way people talk about religious conversions. As someone I was particularly fond of once told me, "I figured you can't be that bad of a person because you like Bruce."

Springsteen's unparalleled career will hit yet another peak Tuesday with the release of his new album, "Wrecking Ball," and I'm happy to report it's absolutely terrific, as lyrically powerful and musically interesting as anything he's done in his four-decade career.

Focusing on the post-Great Recession wreckage brought on by a financial system benefiting a privileged few, it has an anger and a violence to its characters and anti-heroes that channels all the rage and discontent of the times.

From "Shackled and Drawn" to "This Depression," the many narrators certainly express their inchoate rage that "up on Banker's Hill the party's going strong," but more importantly the Boss directly challenges the incredible deficit of empathy felt by the rest of us and the weird asymmetrical polarization of the body politic into a camp that has spent all its influence trying to unravel our already tattered social safety net during the worst downturn since the Great Depression.

All it takes is a look at economic plans of the current crop of Republican candidates to see how this deeply shameful indifference has expressed itself politically.

Even the least-regressive plan offered by Mitt "Mittsanity" Romney essentially amounts to socialism for the rich. As Wonkblog's Ezra Klein explained, Romney essentially wants to take policies that offer support to the working poor (familiarize yourself with that term; it's where most of the country is headed) and "use them as a piggy bank for tax cuts." According to an analysis by the non-partisan Tax Policy Center, Romney's plan would save the top 1 percent of income earners an average of $149,997 per year.

Forget how many Cadillacs Romney's wife owns or whether Rick Santorum thinks Satan is after him—that should be the scandal of the election.

Through the past four hard and remarkable years we've not only watched the economy suffer but witnessed an erosion of the idea that we are inexorably linked, that we owe each other something: that the schools on the South Side of Chicago matter because a child in them might one day either rob you or work in the cubicle next to you, that the highways in Ohio matter because your daughter might one day have her life saved by a guardrail, that the funding of Medicaid matters because you might one day have to care for a disabled sibling, that home heating oil subsidies matter because one day your friend's luck might run out and she will rely on that very inexpensive and simple subsidy to keep her family warm.

"Wrecking Ball" is an album about what it's like to be an American in these strange, anxious times, a threnody for, as the man says, the "distance between the American dream and the American reality."

Diagnosing the food problems

By Georgia Garvey

REDEYE

Michelle McDonald isn't on "The Biggest Loser."

She doesn't want or need to lose that much weight, but even if she did, the 27-year-old from Logan Square wouldn't have the 24-hour-a-day help in the form of trainers, dietitians and doctors to make eating healthier and working out easy. Instead, she has to motivate herself, plan her workouts and buy what she would need on her own.

"I have always battled my weight since I was little," said McDonald, a nanny who takes care of kids from 7 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday through Friday. "In high school I had thinned out ... [but] slowly that crept back up on me."

Years ago, McDonald might have picked up a diet book with a regimented eating plan or been put on a strict exercise schedule by a doctor. But now, experts such as Dr. Robert Kushner at Northwestern Memorial Hospital are trying to develop a new way of tackling the problem.

Kushner, medical director for the Center for Lifestyle Medicine, has developed an 80-question survey to identify the types of problems dieters get themselves into. The result of his 10 years of research is a list of six personalities—from the "couch champion" to the "self-critic"—that he hopes will easily identify and help people who want to get their health in order.

"It's the opposite of a one-size-fits-all approach that a diet book has," he said. "The idea would be you would get very specific strategies."

Someone like Kenya Hicks, a 35-year-old living on the South Side, might be considered a "fast-pacer," a person with so many demands that exercise and healthy eating are difficult. Hicks, who works in the suburbs, commutes about four hours a day on average in addition to being a single mom and taking care of her niece.

"It's just really hard to find the time," she said. "Usually I'm so tired, I just want to rest."

Strategies that would help Hicks might not be as useful for someone like Erin Johnson, 32, of Logan Square, who works in the financial services industry. Johnson has a workout facility in her high-rise and doesn't have the same commuting problems.

Food blogger Jessie Newman
LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

"The biggest struggle for me is not being prepared," said Johnson, who has managed to lose about 18 pounds by addressing those challenges. She carries some kind of healthy food with her. "I always have something that I can snack on so I don't binge on whatever is closest."

Kushner might call Johnson an "accidental diner," someone who grabs food on the go and doesn't tend to spend a lot of time with meal planning.

In the most recent issue of the Journal of Sport and Exercise Psychology, researchers found that there are differences week to week and day to day in what people do to stay healthy. Short-term motivation may evolve into long-term apathy or change depending on a variety of factors.

So it's important, experts such as Kushner say, to make sure people know what motivates them and what weight-loss strategies work for their lives.

Jessy Newman, a 26-year-old Lakeview resident, is a food blogger who's trying to eat healthier while maintaining her love of food and fine dining.

"When I crave something or I want something, I have to have it. I have to balance letting myself have it when I want it," she said. "If you're constantly trying to deprive yourself, you're going to cave and eat everything in sight."

CPD readying for G-8, NATO protests

Chicago Tribune

Even if everything goes according to plan, the first day of the G-8 summit will be a very trying Saturday in May for the Chicago Police Department.

At least two major demonstrations are planned for downtown and organizers of both want to send crowds of marchers down Michigan Avenue in the middle of the day. And those are just the ones police know about because demonstration leaders sought city permits.

Police officials have estimated that 2,000 to 10,000 demonstrators may show up in search of a global spotlight during the three days of the overlapping Group of Eight and North Atlantic Treaty Organization meetings, but some experts believe the crowds could swell to multiples of that range.

Whatever the numbers May 19-21, police have to be ready to handle it without missing a beat on their usual priorities.

While the department has remained secretive about its plans, police officials said training for the summits has been far more extensive than for the last such event in town.

In 2002, to prepare for the Trans-Atlantic Business Dialogue summit, which drew protests against globalization, the department's tactical and other specialized officers trained for just eight hours, said Brian Murphy, chief of the Bureau of Organizational Development.

For G-8 and NATO, the same group of specialized officers is going through five days of training designed "specifically for those front and center" officers, Murphy said.

In recent months, the department sent officers to a Department of Homeland Security facility in Alabama to be

Ivo Daalder, the U.S. ambassador to NATO, speaks to the Tribune editorial board Friday about the future of NATO and the upcoming NATO and G-8 summits in Chicago. STEVEN ROSENBERG/TRIBUNE trained as instructors so they could come back to Chicago and teach thousands of officers a three-day crowd-control program. The department has added another two days of training.

The Police Department refused to provide numbers, but police sources familiar with the planning said the department has so far sent about 8,400 of its roughly 12,000 sworn officers through some form of crowd-control training.

To date, about 2,400 officers drawn mostly from tactical and gang units have completed the training designed to prepare them for the front lines of crowd control. Those officers likely would be outfitted in the black body armor that police call "turtle suits."

SNEAK PEEK

The G-8 and NATO summits from May 19-21 will bring world political and financial leaders to the McCormick Place convention center on the south lakefront, while demonstrations and protest parades are expected to range from Daley Plaza in the Loop business district to Michigan Avenue.

Another 6,000 officers have taken a less intensive program of up to two days to make them ready to be responders working downtown during the summits, dressed in more traditional uniforms, sources said.

Casimir Pulaski Day

On Monday, the city of Chicago and Cook County will observe Casimir Pulaski Day, a holiday in honor of the Polish-born cavalry officer fatally wounded in the Revolutionary War. Romney gains steam ahead of Super Tuesday

4 WASHINGTON Mitt Romney closed in on Rick Santorum in Ohio and picked up a crucial endorsement in Virginia on Sunday as he grows in strength ahead of Super Tuesday, the biggest day yet in the race for the 2012 Republican presidential nomination.

A Reuters/Ipsos poll found Romney, a former Massachusetts governor, is tied with Santorum at 32 percent support from likely voters in the Ohio Republican primary, the most important of the 10 state nominating contests Tuesday.

Santorum, a former Pennsylvania senator who is a social conservative with a strong blue-collar message, had been leading in polls in the economically hard-hit Midwestern state by double digits in recent weeks.

Santorum needs an Ohio win to prove he remains a threat to Romney after losing Michigan and Arizona to him last week.

But Romney's five straight victories in Maine, Michigan, Arizona, Wyoming and Washington state have given him a burst of momentum despite some serious reservations about him from conservatives who have flirted with a variety of alternatives.

Romney aide Eric Fehrnstrom was cautious about Romney's prospects in Ohio, saying the campaign was more con-

OBAMA ISSUES WARNING

President Obama warned Sunday against "loose talk" of a war with Iran ahead of a crucial meeting in which he will urge Israel's prime minister to avoid a premature strike on the Islamic Republic's nuclear facilities. On the eve of his talks with Benjamin Netanyahu, Obama used a speech to the pro-Israel U.S. lobbying group AIPAC to pledge his staunch support for the Jewish state and to argue that international sanctions on Iran must be given more time.

cerned about getting enough delegates to seal the nomination.

"I don't think any state is a must-win. I think the only must-do on a candidate's checklist is getting 1,144 delegates," he told reporters on Romney's plane.

Adding to his momentum in the race to become the challenger to President Obama in the Nov. 6 election, Romney picked up the endorsement of Eric Cantor, the conservative No. 2 Republican in the House of Representatives.

5 16 people killed in Polish train wreck

Poland's President Bronislaw Komorowski announced a two-day national mourning period Sunday for the 16 people killed in a head-on collision of two trains in the country's worst rail accident in more than two decades. The trains collided at an average speed of 60 mph Saturday night after one of them switched to the wrong track, officials said.

6 Putin claims victory in Russian election

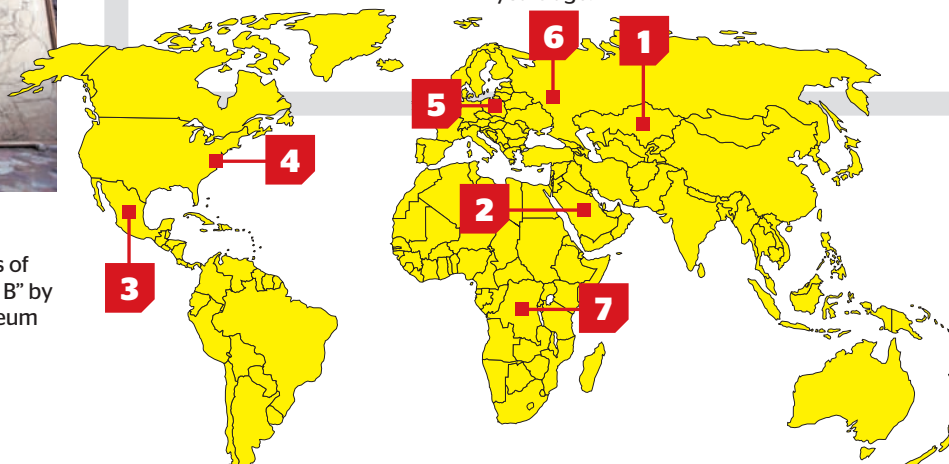

Vladimir Putin claimed victory in Russia's presidential election Sunday and, tears rolling down his cheeks, said it was a historical turning point that had prevented the country falling into the hands of enemies trying to usurp power. The prime minister's opponents said there had been widespread fraud, and vowed to press on with the biggest protests since he rose to power 12 years ago.

7 Hundreds die in blast at Congo depot

Around 200 people were killed on Sunday when an arms dump exploded in Brazzaville, ripping apart a nearby neighborhood in the Congo Republic's capital, medical and local authorities said. Around 200 more were injured by the blasts, which rocked the riverside capital around 8 a.m. The blast was so strong it shattered windows in the neighboring city.

Advertising exodus after Limbaugh comment

A flower company is the seventh advertiser to pull its ads from conservative talk show host Rush Limbaugh's radio program in reaction to his derogatory comments about a law student who testified about birth control policy. Limbaugh called Sandra Fluke, 30, a "slut" and "prostitute" last week after she testified to congressional Democrats in support of national health care policies. He apologized Saturday for his word choices.

THE DIGIT

That's how much China has boosted its defense budget, its government announced Sunday. The Pentagon estimated China's real total military outlays in 2010 were more than $160 billion, which would easily make it the world's second-biggest defense spender after the U.S.

What fuels the heated Blackhawks-Detroit rivalry?

RedEye

The Blackhawks-Detroit Red Wings rivalry is an old one. It dates back to 1926, in fact, when the teams joined the NHL.

With so much history between them, it's easy to see why fans resort to the tried-and-true "Detroit sucks" chant when the Blackhawks play the Red Wings.

On Sunday, the two met again. And, as always it seems, it was a big game. The Hawks are fighting for a playoff spot while the Red Wings are fighting for the No. 1 seed in the Western Conference. In the end, the Blackhawks helped their cause with a 2-1 win, adding fuel to the rivalry's fire.

Even before Sunday's result, there were plenty of reasons Blackhawks fans hate—or strongly dislike—the Red Wings.

Here's a refresher why.

They're good

Yes, it pains most fans to admit it, but the Red Wings always seem to be a contender for either the Central Division title or the Stanley Cup altogether. This season is no exception, with the Wings atop the division.

Those ugly unis

The Red Wings' all-red home uniforms, besides begging for a little variety, look like something the Soviets should have worn back in the day.

Niklas Kronwall

This guy. He always has a big hit reserved for a Blackhawk. Remember the 2009 playoffs when he crushed Martin Havlat?

Cup checks

The Red Wings have 11 Stanley Cup titles. The Blackhawks have four.

Game 1

The first-ever Chicago Black Hawks (that's what they were called in 1926) loss was to the Detroit Cougars. It's gone downhill ever since.

Face to face

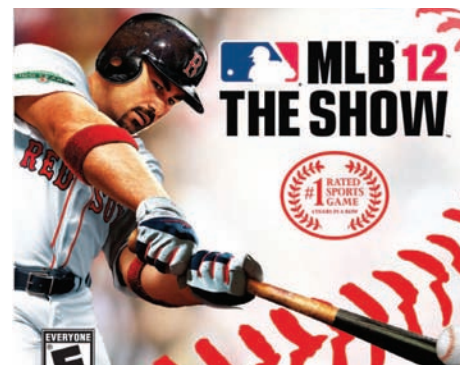

The Blackhawks' record against Detroit is 272-354-84-9. That translates to not good.

1 What's Carlos Boozer's secret to starting every Bulls game so far?	He's taking special care not to jump anywhere in the vicinity of an offensive rebound.	Easy: That hair-met!	He's been replacing himself with a cardboard cutout on all defensive possessions.	He always remembers to put his gym bag away?	Crouching Boozer, hidden defense. The secret story of a Bull who can't jump.
2 The "Detroit sucks" chant is inaccurate. What's your anti-Red Wings chant?	"Clint Eastwood for president!" Wait, sorry, I'm a month behind on my Detroit controversies.	"When Detroit wins, America loses!" I know, it's a bit long.	The chant I currently use cannot be printed in a family paper.	Sorry Clint Eastwood, the CITY of Detroit still sucks, so the chant stays.	Inaccurate? Try it this way. "De-troit sucks! De-troit sucks!!" It's all in the pacing.
3 How did you celebrate the start of the Cubs' spring training games?	By moving the Alfonso Soriano Doomsday clock a minute closer to midnight.	I had some guy from Waukegan in cargo shorts come throw up on my lawn.	By creating anagrams for Theo Epstein. "The snipe toe." Now it's your turn!	Started packing for my trip to Mesa—by Thursday afternoon I'll be boozing in the sun!	Drank at Cubby Bear. Sang "Go Cubs Go." Relieved myself in an alley off Waveland. Feels just like the regular season.
4 Why did LeBron James pass up another chance to win a game this weekend?	LeBronCorp is positioning itself as worldwide leader in distribution solutions. Deferring Potential Indefinitely.	I don't care about LeBron James. You shouldn't either.	Still sore over getting a poor grade for sharing in kindergarten.	He's still waiting on those onions he ordered years ago. He's got NO ONIONS.	Shhhhhhhh! Let's just hope it continues against the Bulls.
5 If you could place a bounty on an NFL player, whom would it be?	Five shiny nickels for the man who convinces Victor Cruz to can that end zone dance. We're over it.	His name rhymes with "Him? He Blow."	Aaron Rodgers. Bounty paid once he is frozen in carbonite.	I usually don't endorse violence with intent to harm, but I'd make an exception for Michael Vick.	How about Bounty paper towels for J'Marcus Webb after the mess he creates at left tackle for the Bears.

Illinois State nearly upsets its way to NCAA tourney

It's already out of control.

College basketball conference tournaments are in full swing, and with them the quest for berths in the NCAA Tournament.

Illinois State on Sunday was involved in a thrilling Missouri Valley Conference title game matchup against Creighton.

The Redbirds entered on a high after upsetting No. 15 Wichita State in the MVC semifinals Saturday.

ISU took No. 25 Creighton to overtime but could not pull off a second upset as the Bluejays earned a hard-fought 83-79 win. The MVC title is Creighton's first since 2007.

The fourth-seeded Redbirds (20-13), who finished in last place in the MVC last season, were hoping for their first NCAA Tournament bid in 14 years. They'll have to settle for a likely NIT berth.

"I can't even begin to describe how much pain we're in," Illinois State coach Tim Jankovich said. "Five of our top nine guys coming into this season had never played college basketball before. That's why it hurts to come this close and not win."

The game featured nine ties and 14 lead changes. The teams combined to score on 13 straight possessions in the final five minutes, keeping the 12,308 spectators on their feet.

"That's why we work so hard in practices—to play in these games on national TV," said

Illinois loses again

Any slim chance Illinois had of making the NCAA Tournament faded in a 70-56 loss at Wisconsin on Sunday. The Fighting Illini (17-14) have gone 2-11 since upsetting Ohio State on Jan. 20. "We've been through a really rough stretch in our season and in our lives," Illinois coach Bruce Weber said.

Doug McDermott, Creighton's leading scorer with 33 points. "You just try to stay in the moment."

'Game of Thrones' Blu-ray offers splurge-worthy extras

SHOW PATROL

Never was there a TV series more worthy of bingeing than "Game of Thrones," HBO's hit adaptation of George R.R. Martin's "A Song of Ice and Fire" novels.

It's a masterfully told story that returns for its second season April 1. In the meantime, if you wish to review Season 1 or see it for the first time, there's no better way than with "The Complete First Season" DVD ($59.99) or Blu-ray ($79.98) sets, both out Tuesday.

If you're about to say, "I don't get into fantasy stories," zip it. You will miss out. Writers-producers David Benioff and D.B. Weiss have shaped this epic series about the conflict engulfing the Seven Kingdoms of Westeros into a smartly written examination of power plays, family dynamics, loyalty and standing firm for your beliefs no matter the costs.

They never get lost in the vastness of Martin's tale, however, keeping a firm focus on the individuals involved in all the intrigues. Despite having several major storylines and at least a half-dozen minor storylines, "Game" is character driven, and they are as complex as characters can get.

Take Tyrion Lannister (Emmy winner Peter Dinklage), for example. The dwarf brother of Queen Cersei (Lena Headey) starts out as a vile monster who is hated by his sister and feared by people outside his family. As the season progresses and we learn about his past, Tyrion becomes much more sympathetic and earns your respect and, dare I say, love.

Game of Thrones: The Complete First Season

DVD

BLU-RAY

Your opinion of many characters will change over time, which is a testament to the excellent writing and marvelous cast of actors.

The series alone makes the DVD set worth buying. I only purchase DVD sets but if they offer fantastic extras to expand on the show or movie I've already seen. I even love listening to the episode commentaries. (I'm kind of a geek that way.) HBO delivers with the "Games of Thrones" sets.

The DVD extras include character profiles and seven audio commentaries with the producers and many of the actors (Headey curses like a sailor; it's awesome) and one with Martin himself. The featurettes include a making-of, "From the Book to the Screen," "The Night's Watch," "Creating the Dothraki Language" and "Creating the Show Open." The sets are packaged with a foldout map of Westeros and a look at the powerful houses, or families.

There's enough fun in the DVD set to keep you busy until April 1.

BLU-RAY EXTRA EXTRAS!

If you really want to go deep into the world of Westeros, I suggest you splurge for the Blu-ray version of "Game of Thrones." In addition to everything on the DVD set, the Blu-ray offers four more extensive extras. Despite the large amount of characters and the many storylines, I feel the series does an excellent job of keeping everything moving and clear so as not to confuse viewers. But if you want more help keeping everything straight, these extras are indispensable:

» The "Complete Guide to Westeros" is an interactive compilation of entries about the noble houses and their lands, along with 24 animated histories of the Seven Kingdoms as told by the characters themselves (actors Mark Addy, Harry Lloyd, Charles Dance, Michelle Fairley, Richard Madden, Isaac Hempstead-Wright and others).

» The In-Episode Guide acts like an optional menu bar down the side of the screen while you watch. Without pausing, you can learn about the people in the scene you are watching and the location they are in. You can pause the episode and go to the "Complete Guide" if you want to go deeper.

» "Anatomy of an Episode" examines in great detail what went into making Episode 6, called "A Golden Crown." My favorite little nugget from this feature is learning the horse heart that Daenerys Targaryen (Emilia Clarke) eats was basically a big gummy bear.

» I have yet to find the Hidden Dragon Eggs (their version of Easter eggs), but apparently six are hidden here. I've read they include audition tapes and one of Jason Momoa doing the Hawaiian haka dance. HBO says it will offer clues on Twitter and Facebook to finding them.

"Game of Thrones: The Complete First Season" is not only binge-worthy. I'd call it splurge-worthy, too.

Jokes started early for Jonathan Kite

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

» @showpatrol

Jonathan Kite has been performing for as long as he can remember.

"My dad and I would watch old movies so I would do
old movie impressions," said Kite, who plays lecherous Ukrainian short-order cook

Oleg on the CBS sitcom "2 Broke Girls"
(7:30 p.m. Monday, CBS). "I loved running around and doing funny voices. I liked to make people laugh."

Kite went on to wow his parents' friends and co-workers, his classmates and people in grocery stores in Chicago and Skokie, where he grew up. "I would just be silly," he said.
"My parents allowed me to enjoy that part of my personality."

After studying theater at the University of Illinois, he took time off from acting to save up money by working at The Cheesecake Factory. Contrary to some reports, he wasn't part of Second City, but he saw plenty of the theater's shows.

"I saw a [bleep]-ton of Chicago theater and I love the scene, but I never really auditioned for it," he said. "I had my sights set on L.A."

Kite's knack for doing dialects and impersonations—Tom Hanks, Vince Vaughn, Nicholas Cage and about 45 others—led to work in commercials and voice-over jobs, and eventually to "2 Broke Girls."

His character, Oleg, was originally supposed to be a 45-year-old bald guy. Then creators Michael Patrick King and Whitney Cummings met the then-31-year-old Kite, who wore white sweat socks, nasty brown flip-flops, a stained undershirt, a hairnet and tiger print Lycra pants he found at Goodwill and

Kite as Oleg on
'2 Broke Girls'

hemmed to be clam-diggers to his audition.

At the first audition, Kite complimented Cummings but none of the other producers assembled. When he realized what he'd done, he turned to the group and said, "I only said that to Whitney. That's because I haven't heard of the rest of you. I'm Jonathan Kite; IMDB me and let's start this audition."

"Michael Patrick King started laughing," Kite said. "He told me [after I was hired] that's when the job was mine."

He's been having fun being lewd and crude ever since. (Sample Oleg line: "Once you go Ukraine, you will scream in sex pain!")

"It's awesome," he said. "It's so much fun to play a guy who gets away with all the stuff Oleg does."

horoscopeROMANCE PLANETBY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COMPisces Feb. 19-March 20

You're getting clearer about what you want and what you don't want when it comes to romance. The sun is filling you with grand ideas. You'll no longer settle for dating someone non-exclusively. And you won't tolerate clumsy techniques in the bedroom, either.

Aries March 21-April 19

A moon opposition is warning you to take it slow. Don't over-share on your first date. That cute guy or hot girl doesn't need to know about your multiple divorces or those three prior felony convictions.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Venus is turning you into a lovestruck fool. You might decide that your current honey is your ultimate soulmate. You could be right, but you still need to give the relationship more time before holding onto it as a forever thing.

Gemini May 21-June 21

You could find yourself having heated arguments with your significant other. Tension can be a great aphrodisiac, so it will only help your sex life. But you'll still have to face reality and deal with your problems the next morning.

Cancer June 22-July 22

A hypersensitive sun has you imagining the worst. What if your fiancé is really an axe murderer or your wife has a secret addiction to Jennifer Aniston movies? You're convinced something awful lurks beneath the surface.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

You'll want your honey to prove his or her affection for you. Mercury is making you super picky. You'll demand constant worship, compliments and displays of physical affection. You're great at turning a partner into your sex slave.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

As Mercury goes retrograde, you've got a sinking feeling that won't go away. You're wondering if it was stupid to quit that dead-end job without another position lined up or if breaking up with that super nice guy or girl was the dumbest thing ever.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Issues like schedules, custody agreements and legal contracts could be affecting your relationship, thanks to Saturn's heavy hand. It's time to stop being an ostrich.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Venus is moving opposite your sign for a few weeks, and this means you should try to adopt a sense of humor about your love life. Your dry spell can't last for ever.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Someone could surprise you with intense flirtation just when you thought you had "loser" permanently etched on your forehead. Mercury is stirring up some sexy banter, and you'll be feeling better in no time.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You could be trying to figure out how to move forward with a relationship as Venus encourages you to take the next step. Just make sure you're not doing it out of pressure. If you decide to adopt pound puppies with your honey, make sure your heart is really in it.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

A moon opposition is confusing you. You're having troubles figuring out what your partner really wants. Instead of trying to be a mind reader, it could be a good idea to actually have an honest discussion with your sweetheart.

They’ve got the moves:
All aboard for a Maroon 5 party

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com

» @aboutluisgomez

You’ve seen concerts at the United Center and the Allstate Arena, at Metro and the Riviera Theatre. But have you ever seen a band play in a train station?

About 1,800 Chicagoans did Thursday—for free.

Maroon 5 and “Love Song” singer Sara Bareilles performed in Union Station’s Great Hall to promote the launch of gaming giant Caesars Entertainment Corp.’s “Escape to Total Rewards” members program. The show also included a live feed from three other shows taking place simultaneously in L.A., New York and New Orleans, giving the event a New Year’s Eve-like feel.

The piano-playing Bareilles opened for Maroon 5 with a six-song set, including a cover of Beyoncé’s “Single Ladies (Put a Ring on It).” Afterward, guests turned their attention to the big screen above the stage to watch performances from Lil Wayne, Mariah Carey, Diddy and Gavin DeGraw.

Adam Levine and his Maroon 5 bandmates took the stage after that. The band has been on a roll lately, playing the Grammys, “Saturday Night Live” and the Victoria’s Secret Fashion Show in the past few months, not to mention the New England Patriots’ Super Bowl after-party. Yes, the same party where the Patriots’ Rob Gronkowski sparked controversy by dancing after his team’s loss.

“That happened later, during LMFAO’s set,” Maroon 5 guitarist James Valentine told me over the phone Wednesday, ashamed that his band didn’t elicit the same reaction from the Pro Bowl tight end. “That’s [LMFAO’s] specialty. We need to look into what we did wrong and might need to take a look at our party-rocking skills.”

"Community" fans will get to go back to school a little early. According to thr.com, Hulu will air three animated webisodes voiced by the show's actors starting Wednesday. The webisodes, which will follow Abed after he gets his hands on the master key to Greendale Community College, are a reminder that the show returns to NBC on March 15.

Jennifer Aniston is fine, everyone. Really. Just fine. In fact, she describes her current happiness level at "10-plus" and credits her Zen approach to life, according to people.com. Lo blow

Lindsay Lohan helped "Saturday Night Live" claim its second-highest ratings this season, thr.com reports. While Lohan received mixed reviews in her performance as host, musician Josh Groban gave the show a piece of his mind, tweeting: "East coasters, what's happening on #SNL? Should I keep practicing and working hard at what I do, or is that not necessary any more?" Ouch. When you get burned by Groban, that's bad.
